Juniors Show 'Great Exuberance' Monday

Monday night in Wilson Auditorium, the Junior Class really hit it with a great exuberance in their class night minstrel show. Before the curtain opened, all eyes were focused on a little red wagon which was being tugged around by the blacked-up usherettes to tote around faculty members and housemothers. It set the perfect mood for the show ahead.

As the curtain opened the typical minstrel setting was revealed with the chorus members of the class of '54 dressed in evening gowns and tuxedos lined across the back of the stage; the Interlocutor, Jackie King, dressed in high hat and tails was the center piece while flanking her on each side sat the backbones of the show—the hilarious end men featuring Billie Tyler as Mr. Revolution, Gil Hinman as Mr. Constitution, Sheila Bell taking the part of Mr. Institution, Suzie Roberts filling the bill as Mr. Destitution, Johnnie Lou Thompson cast as Mr. Resolution, and Dickie Dickerson arriving a little late to take Mr. Prosperity's role in the show. Each started things off "with a bang" by telling a side-splitting experience in which he had been involved.

P. E. Majors

"Ten Little Indians" featuring Dolly Rutherford, Joanne Jonas, Suzanne Roberts, and Billie Tyler was the first specialty number. Next the shoeshine boys alias the Junior P.E. majors took the spotlight as they sang, danced, and enacted the roles of "Chattanooga Shoeshine Boy."

From there the end men prompted by Mr. Interlocutor captured the audience with more of the antics. Helen Webber rendering "Somebody Lied" seized the solo spot followed by the chorus doing "Are You From Dixie?"

Specialties

Christmas Season--- On Sniper Ridge Too

As Christmas draws near, we turn our eyes and hearts toward the greatest promise of the past. We sing the songs and view the pageantry of the Yuletide season; and every now and then, our souls are deeply touched by some nameless emotion. We stand in a church and suddenly, our eyes are filled with tears; the silent kind that well and flow like the endless tides of the ocean. The sight of the manger scene or an early dawn snow on the crest of the hill moves our hearts.

We feel safe, secure, warm and comfortable, and we are, within our thoughts. For a time, we shut out all that is crass and ugly. We forget the black shadows of war by staring blindly into the bright lights of a holiday.

We plan and laugh and live and send our gay presents tied with pretty ribbons. But all the packages and gayety in the world cannot melt the snows on Sniper Ridge or dam the tide of the Red Chinese hoards. How can all people celebrate His birthday in one breath and curse their fellowman with the next?

We must take an inventory of ourselves and straighten the crooked thoughts so the tongue does not belie itself by a curse and a blessing in the same breath.

We shut our minds to the worst and emphasize the problems of our narrowed existence. Within the cloister of our college-tuned minds, we look on all life as college-centered. The letters we write breathe of this spirit.

The Yuletide season draws nigh; we must take stock of ourselves, our ideals and our interests. The college student in the classroom and the young soldier traveling toward his debarkation point have something in common; concern for the future and the dream of a peaceful world.

The war goes on, but all our hearts unite, bursting the seams of their confines, in a prayer for peace. The season of promise comes and goes and all go back to their stations in life, and to their stations, they take the divine light of hope that never is dimmed.

The College student returns to the classroom and the train carrying the soldier rushes onward.

Convention Success -- Fun Had By All

by Dillon, Mason, and Tunison

Rain — never ceasing rain — darkness, like black satin — the rumble of an occasional truck breaks the silence — and three sleepy heads departed, not too alert, at five-thirty Friday morning. Blacksburg and the VIPA convention was the destination.

As there was no one to meet us at the bus, four VMI cadets helped us find the SAB building where we registered. In the main dining hall that night, we were warmly received by over a thousand cadets and civilians — What a reception! The Editor of the Virginia Tech, who was our dinner escort, was just as embarrassed as we were. "I've never brought one girl in here, much less three — I knew it would be like this." After dinner, the Maroon Mask presented four one act plays which were followed by an informal dance in the SAB. The combo from the Southern Colonels was really hot—oooh, that Dixieland!

Saturday morning, the meetings were opened with an informal talk by Dr. Newman, President of the college. The newspaper critique session was led by Mr. Fred Loeffler, of the Roanoke Times. Mr. Loeffler is a graduate of Washington and Lee and offered much constructive criticism for all phases of newspaper work.

Lunch in the faculty dining room was very calm, serene and enjoyable after our experience the night before. Following lunch, all the delegates were taken on a tour of the various publications offices.

At three-thirty, we had the formal business meeting, at which officers were elected for the coming year. Randolph-Macon Woman's College invited the VIPA to hold the convention on their campus next fall.

Two-Inch Steaks

The banquet Saturday night featured Congressman-elect William C. Wampler of Bristol, Virginia; Professor Walter S. Spearman, of the University of North Carolina, and two inch steaks.

As soon as the banquet was over, all the delegates rushed back to their rooms and changed clothes for the cabin party at Claytor Lake. The door key to the cabin was mislaid, so we all made our grand entrance through the window. We were floored at the magnificent preparations the chairman had made—huge fire in the fireplace, and entertainment in the form of three ukes and a "vic".

Our hats are off to Jack Deaton, the convention chairman, and our hosts, the Virginia Tech men, for a weekend which will long be remembered.

The Work Basket

by Coni Mason

Eight more shopping days until Christmas — Seems impossible that the holidays are but a few night's sleep away— Then home for all the parties and reunions, dances and get-togethers— The knitting needles will be clicking furiously from here on in—

From what I have gathered, the evaluation committee was greatly impressed with our college — We had a lot of big people on campus last week — And weren't the men from Washington interesting — Have heard several favorable comments about the Frenchman and the Turk —

Mrs. Glenn Curtis Smith bakes the most terrific cakes — and Dr. "Jingle Bells" Smith can really sing—

Mr. Black, one of our faithful night watchmen, will be retiring at the end of the month — We will all miss the "Key-stone Cop"—

I have heard of being surprised with a birthday cake, but the story of all surprises occurred the other night in Senior Hall — It seems that someone put the cake in the closet — when it was time for the surprise, the girl fell and sat in it! One consolation though—the candles weren't lit—

The ACE girls entertained the children from the orphanage with a coke party— I think the children had loads of fun.

It will be 1953 before we all are back

Peace Main Point Of Controversy Monday

On Monday, December 8, the Junior Class presented the "World Affairs Council as their class day assembly. This was a panel in the form of a miniature security council. On the panel were John Metcalfe, journalist in the United States who served as moderator, Camille Chautemps, four times Premier of France, Cuneyd Dosdogru, part-owner of the Ankara News Agency of Turkey, and Melchoir Aquino, Philippine delegate to United Nations.

First discussed were the governmental status in the various countries. Mr. Dosdogru stated that Turkey is not happy, but there is a great deal of hope among the people; Filipino people are more than ever conscious and appreciative of their freedom; France thinks that Europe will be most important in the future of our world situation while the United States is concentrating on the Orient, Japan in particular and in Europe, Germany must be held.

A question drawing much controversy, especially between Mr. Chautemps and Mr. Dosdogru was that of the establishment of peace. The points of disagreement were those of resources. France considers that the steel industry plays one of the biggest parts in the support and bringing about of peace. On the other hand Mr. Aquino emphasized that the Middle East produces 42% of the world's oil which is more important to progress than steel. Also the middle East produces a great deal of chrome.

French willingness to fight in Indo-China and a study of the situation there was discussed lengthily. Clinching the discussion of this question the delegate from Turkey observed that he believes that the U.N. will always be there to help put a stop to aggression.

In commenting upon the world today the delegates expressed a variety of opinions. Mr. Dosdogru observed the general disagreement in small things but that there is agreement in the principles; France is optimistic and believes that the allies should work together to secure world peace; Mr. Aquino expressed the Philippine regard for the source of democracy.

During the question period students were interested to know of Communism in the respective countries. It is unAmerican here, and Turkey punishes Communism with death. Mr. Chautemps of France, didn't express a particular problem between the French people and Communist, however, he did admit that it was very un-French to be Communist. Also discussed was the fact that in some areas as Japan when Communism cannot become a part of an infiltrate into the government it settles down and tries to join the Japanese.

In Western Germany the Communists today, as the Germans of the last war, are concentrating their propaganda and militarism on the youth.

In closing, the panel was asked their opinion of Eisenhower's election to the Presidency of the United States. Mr. Dosdogru of Turkey stated that a change of administration after 20 years of the Democratic Party was definitely good. However, he observed that this change does not mean that we will return to the characteristics of former Republican administrations as isolationism. Mr. Chautemps of France pointed out that the French people have a great deal of faith in Eisenhower as their liberator. Being very diplomatic, Mr. Aquino said he thought the President-elect was a fine man.

He interviewed ninety-eight students who expressed an interest in attending Madison College. Any graduates of these schools, now attending Madison College, should see Mr. Eagle and get the names of friends whom they might see during the Christmas holidays and use their influence in helping to bring those persons to Madison for the 1953-54 session.

Dr. C. H. Huffman, Dr. W. J. Gifford, Mr. T. W. Leigh, and Coni Mason attended the Virginia Humanities Conference on November 14, which was held at the Ellen Glasgow House in Richmond, Virginia. Teachers representing practically all colleges in Virginia were present. The morning session consisted mainly of group discussions on Curriculum Offerings in Virginia Colleges. Reports of these discussions, combined with a talk on "The Humanities and Teacher Education" composed the afternoon session. Following the meeting, a tea was held for all delegates who attended.

Could Make-Believe"; and Sheila Bell and Dickie Dickerson intervening to make one person with Dickerson legs and Bell head, shoulders, and everything else as they sang "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" Dolly Rutherford and Joanne Jonas combined in a piano duet; Audrey Sanderson sang "Pickaninny Belles". The Madison fans, Coni Mason and June Tunison, dressed "fit to kill" in evening gowns and Madison sweatshirts sang an original version entitled "Turtle Dove". "A Shanty In Old Shanty Town" was the musical target for a group of uke players. Rosemary Rhinehart sang "Blue Moon" followed by Teak Long and Eugene Crider doing tricky interpretations of "Steal Silently Away" and "The Lost Sheep". Thompson and Staples teamed up to do "And Her Yellow Hair was Falling Down Her Back" while Judy Painter did that "sexy" number "Birth of the Blues". Shirley Crawford and Jean Blosser in full costume did a "solid" jitterbug routine to "Maxey, Waxey Boogie". A tap dance by Joanne Jonas with "Whispering" was played in the background was girls dressed gifts of toys and clothing in gay Christmas wrappings to be placed in their gift basket.

Granddaughters Give Gifts To Unfortunates

In agreement with F. W. Gunsoulus' thought, "There is no happiness in having and getting, but only in giving," members of the Granddaughters' Club hope to brighten the Christmas of an unfortunate family in Harrisonburg with a Christmas basket.

The Granddaughters gathered in Logan recreation room on December 4. After a brief business meeting, the followed by Suzanne Roberts with "Chicken Dinner". "Summertime" was rendered by Betty Landers while Wayne Garber made everybody's heart beat a little faster as he sang that ever popular "Old Man River".

True Showboat Style

The chorus in true showboat style harmonized in such favorites as "Swanee River", "Mississippi Mud", "The Robert E. Lee", and "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

The curtain closed with the entire cast singing "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny" and the audience joining in. A perfect evening of entertainment was brought to a fitting close as Madisonites assembled in front of Wilson around the trees bedecked with Xmas lights (the Junior Class project) to sing carols.

Gyminy Crickets

by Betty Smith

Wednesday morning at 7:45 a basketball rules clinic was effectively staged in Reed Gym by our physical education staff and the senior physical education majors. Miss Celeste Ulrich introduced the program by giving the officiating technique and duties of the umpire and referee. Dot Harris explained the various officiating ratings and the amount of money different officials received. Personal fouls as overguarding, boxing up, and deliberately interfering with the game. Application to the rules stated was carried out when two teams chosen from the senior majors played a basketball game with Miss Ulrich and Miss Hartman officiating. It proved a most worthwhile hour and a quarter.

Bowling lists will go up this week in your respective dormitories. The program is going to be a little different this year with the first two weeks being scheduled for recreative bowling where-by instruction will be given whenever desired. During the last three weeks bowlers will be divided into teams to compete against one another.
